The difference is Gaggenau.

Built by hand

After 300 years, we still handcraft much of what we produce. Many processes, from shaping the initial sheet of steel to assembling our digital interface in our cleanroom, passes through a skilled craftsman's hands, with pride.

The professional kitchen principle

We take our cue from the professional's kitchen, where everything exists to serve the chef. Innovations that aid the chef are embraced and function is everything.

Quality in all things

Everything we do is beyond the norm: from the materials we use, the craftspeople we employ, to the quality control we are zealous about.

Innovative products

We have always been driven and inspired by standards in professional kitchens when developing our products. We strive to continuously offer our customers the very best, custom-designed for private homes.

With their sculptural design, the concise statement that their form makes and the well chosen materials, the appliances of the 400 series have a significant presence without dominating the room.

Precision manufacturing

We process all materials with the greatest of care, whether manually, in industrial small-series production or in advanced high-tech manufacture. We frequently finish the surfaces using sophisticated processing technology.

Only the most experienced employees weld and polish the stainless steel doors of the Vario cooling appliances.

Select materials

Carefully selected materials are an essential requirement for the manufacture of a Gaggenau appliance. We use materials that are known for their durability, such as stainless steel, aluminium, brass, cast iron, enamel and glass.

These glass composites are the raw material for the typical blue enamel of our ovens.

Unique design

When designing our products we call on our unique Gaggenau design language. It is based on the principles of open spaces, clear, geometric shapes and the courage to be minimalist.

Hand-crafted from a single sheet of 3 mm thick stainless steel, the door on our oven EB 333 is cleverly cantilevered to gently close and easily open, while the glass is carefully formulated to insulate without distorting colors.

Exceptional performance

Our appliances are designed not just to deliver outstanding performance, but even have performance capacity in reserve.

With power settings up to 6 kilowatt, the wok burner with three flame rings can do everything from simmering on a low setting to intense browning on the maximum setting.

Intuitive operation

We put a lot of effort into ensuring that our products are as easy and intuitive to use as possible and that they meet the needs of our customers.

With rotary knobs and a TFT touch display, the control module of our ovens 200 and 400 series offers an intelligent combination of analogue and digital elements.

"I wanted a very quiet, well-put-together kitchen with the very best appliances, and everything hidden. A French look."

Once installed, she was intoxicated by the usability and efficiency of the appliances. "I love to cook and am willing to try anything." Her favorite method is sous vide utilizing the combi-steam oven, the recipes on rotation include quails' egg and duck confit as well as the 'jarring' of various foods.

Luxford Group

The creative consultants on this Beverly Hills home originally asked Michael J. Chen to "hide everything." He rebutted: "what is the point of hiding the Gaggenau appliances when you can display them."

He wanted the Gaggenau appliances visible in this spectacular show kitchen. "Simplicity and elegance are key to the design, so we decided to expose it." Architecturally trained, Michael created a home centered on movement, form and texture. "Gaggenau is always the only choice when bringing together simple, sophisticated design and up-to-the-minute technology."
