The difference is Gaggenau.

The CX 491 full surface induction cooktop.

The principle of full surface induction. Beneath the glass ceramic surface of the new CX 491 full surface induction cooktop lies a tight, staggered configuration of 48 micro-inductors. Unlike the large coils found in conventional induction cooktops, this structure transforms the entire cooktop into one large cooking area, allowing cookware of any shape and size to be placed anywhere on its surface.

Intuitive controls. Cooktop functions are controlled via a large TFT touch display with a unique, easy-to-use display concept.

Cooking without limits. Cookware of any shape and size is automatically recognized; heat is only generated where the cookware is detected.

From cooktop to Teppan Yaki. The induction cooktop can easily be converted into a Teppan Yaki with Gaggenau's optional accessory, available in two sizes.
